Nachtrag1

subsistenzwirtschaftsgesetz
nachtrag1
what we lack in todays world is nothing that progress can achieve. we should regress and find back to ourselves (§subsistenzwirtschaftsgesetz pls!) without the need to be employed by society to do this and that. even though i think that my country is one of the most liberal countries in the world (even by statistics). dropping out of society of individuals who for the most parts feel like they have no say in their life because they are bound by all these laws and responsibilities that only pull them down (id like to include myself here) could be a huge loss. but they are still able to publish papers, do crafts etc without taking any money, by swapping goods only. people who lets say lost their house and all belongings in gambles wouldnt have to spiral down the shithole because thats what happens if youve got nothing to hold on to and those people usually have no backup. secondly insurance companies could lose most risky clients 'dropouts' to the law stabilizing the system with time. no second chance for prisoners? i wouldnt be so sure. there are very sick people wanting to be part of a group that would do harm to protect their social standing by doing sick things to those that harm their group. these group vs group dynamics are not programmed into our brains but emerge by necessity/as convention. villages would be formed of closed groups that do their own laws for joining, trade etc. just imagine all the people from organized societies would leave that where a drag to the system (and the few who werent). the divide between the mainstream and the 'poor' would at some definition rise even further but only those would suffer who werent willing to care for themselves (and leeches, who wouldnt take care of children?). elders would need to kill themselves at some point time if they werent able to teach enough to the young but they do nowadays too by eating bad food or nothing at all because its tiresome... . somewhere the verhältnis would einpendeln at id say 30-70. or a interessenkonflikt would arise and theyd start to fight. whatever. just suggesting.
what we lack in todays world is nothing that progress can achieve. we should regress and find back to ourselves (§subsistenzwirtschaftsgesetz pls!) without the need to be employed by society to do this and that. even though i think that my country is one of the most liberal countries in the world (even by statistics). dropping out of society of individuals who for the most parts feel like they have no say in their life because they are bound by all these laws and responsibilities

that only pull them down (id like to include myself here) could be a huge loss. but they are still able to publish papers, do crafts etc without taking any money, by swapping goods only. people who lets say lost their house and all belongings in gambles wouldnt have to spiral down the shithole because thats what happens if youve got nothing to hold on to and those people usually have no backup. secondly insurance companies could lose most risky clients 'dropouts' to the law stabilizing the system with time. no second chance for prisoners? i wouldnt be so sure. there are very sick people wanting to be part of a group that would do harm to protect their social standing by doing sick things to those that harm their group. these group vs group dynamics are not programmed into our brains but emerge by necessity/as convention. villages would be formed of closed groups that do their own laws for joining, trade etc. just imagine all the people from organized societies would leave that where a drag to the system (and the few who werent). the divide between the mainstream and the 'poor' would at some definition rise even further but only those would suffer who werent willing to care for themselves (and leeches, who wouldnt take care of children?). elders would need to kill themselves at some point time if they werent able to teach enough to the young but they do nowadays too by eating bad food or nothing at all because its tiresome... . somewhere the verhältnis would einpendeln at id say 30-70. or a interessenkonflikt would arise and theyd start to fight. whatever. just suggesting.